MESSRS. PROCTER & GAMBLE, CINCINNATI, O.

GENTLEMEN:—Although a stranger to you, and my testimonial entirely unnecessary, as it certainly is unsolicited, yet I take great pleasure in testifying to the excellence of your IVORY SOAP, and thanking you for putting it on the market at so low a price.

It has entirely supplanted the use of Castile and other fine soaps in my household for several years past, being in no way inferior and from fifty to seventy-five per cent. more economical.

A good test I find for the purity of a soap is to try it with a brush for cleansing the teeth, and the taste of the Ivory so used is perfectly sweet and clean.

Very Respectfully Yours, W. S. BAKER, M.D.

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

THE RUSSIAN CAPITAL.

A SAD CITY WITH A STRANGE LACK OF LIFE.

First Impressions of St. Petersburg—Its Unhealthy Position—Coarseness of the Lower Classes—The Droshs and Its Reverent Driver—At Church.

The first impression of the traveler on approaching St. Petersburg is of wonder at its size and its position. On every side stretches of what is apparently a low, flat marsh, covered with innumerable buildings; the strangest place for a city ever chosen by the obstinate will of man, seeking to dispense with all natural advantages. Peter the Great chose it, it is said, as being "a window looking out upon Europe," but surely a site might have been found with an equal outlook and a less desolate and fatal position. Unlike Stockholm, which is likewise surrounded by water, but which sits on her rocky thrones like a queen above the dangerous element, St. Petersburg lies helplessly at its mercy. In autumn, when the Neva is rough and stormy, and in spring, when the ice is breaking up, the danger is greatest. The waves rise to the level of the streets, the numerous canals overflow; guns from the fortress are constantly fired to warn the people of their peril, while the inhabitants seek the upper stories of their houses and the police prepare boats for rescue. Another consequence of this marshy situation is its unhealthiness. The sewage is not properly carried off, the water is undrinkable, and dysentery and similar diseases prevail whenever the friendly frost is not present to turn everything to ice. Peter the Great did not build his capital in ignorance of what he was doing. He laid its foundation upon human lives. For many years 40,000 men were annually drafted from all portions of his empire to work in this poisonous marsh. Every cart and vessel entering the port was obliged to bring a certain number of stones to pave its streets, and hundreds of thousands of wooden piles were buried in its depths. Soil was also brought in in great quantities to raise the level of the place, and massive granite quays built along the rapid river; but nothing has availed to prevent disastrous inundations, seven or eight of which are particularly mentioned since the foundations were laid in 1703. At one time the river rose thirteen feet.

But it is not only the want of elevation and of picturesqueness that is depressing to the visitor; it is no less the wide desolation of the vast open spaces of the city. From the busy moving multitudes and crowded quays of Stockholm we have come to quiet and deserted squares, endless rows of immense buildings, monotonous grandeur and regularity. It is evident that there are not enough people to fill its streets, and it is a positive relief to enter the few thoroughfares where business and life is centered, such as the Newsky Prospect. Of course, in winter, when the court is here and the richest citizens come in from their summer homes in Finland and the islands, when the sleighing is lively and all the gayeties of the season in vogue, St. Petersburg would show to much greater advantage.

We had been told that the contrasts of luxury and poverty on the streets would be most painful, and we expected to meet beggary on every hand, but such has not proved to be the case. There are always beggars at the church doors, but seldom elsewhere, and poverty is by no means so obvious and distressing as th many cities. It is not the poverty, but the coarseness, almost brutality, in the lower classes that impresses you most vividly. The men that you meet in their sordid rags or their undressed sheepskins seem not to need nor desire any better raiment. It is suitable to them. Wild of face, with long, tangled hair, and inexpressibly dirty, often half drunk, but never scringing, you shrink from rather than pity them. The pictures drawn by Tolstoi are seen to be fearfully realistic. The women are less forbidding, but with little intelligence or good humor. Actually I have never seen a smile nor heard a laugh in the streets since we have been here. Nobody understands or wishes to understand you; the poor are sullen, the well-to-do careless or insolent. And then there is so much that is strange and utterly foreign. For some, to us, unexplained reason the days of the month are changed. You thought it was the 20th of August—you find it is the 8th. The Russian alphabet is very different from ours, and the names of the streets and the signs over the shops might as well be written in Runic. As very few of the natives, however, are better off than yourself in this respect, the shopkeepers do not trust to the alphabet for setting forth their wares.

I have complained of the want of life in the streets. I must make an exception in favor of the droskas. These little carriages fly about in every direction, for everybody rides. You look down one of the long quays perhaps and see no walkers, no loungers, but you are sure to see droskas. They are small, low vehicles, each holding two passengers, with a driver on a high seat in front clad in a long blue blouse, with a leather girdle and a peculiar cap on his head. The horses, with their huge arched collars, are active and gentle and apparently well treated, and if you know enough Russian to make a bargain, you will find this method of transit a cheap and convenient one. It is certainly convenient; you have only to raise your hand and droskas sweep down upon you like vultures on their prey, sometimes jostling each other in their endeavor to reach you the first; but as none of the drivers know a word of anything but Russian, you may not find it very easy to make them comprehend where you want to go. This difficulty overcome, however, you will soon be spinning at a rapid rate over the badly paved streets. You will probably soon notice the driver snatch off his cap, wave it in the air, and, replacing it, make a hasty sign of the cross by touching the forehead, breast and each shoulder in succession. This is when a church is passed, and such recognition of the sacred edifices and shrines is common among both walkers and riders.

There is no nation probably so devoted to religious forms as the Russian—certainly none which believes so implicitly in the value of signs and genuflexions. It is strange enough to watch the crowd which fills the church during service time. There are never any seats; all, rich and poor, stand together; but in place of standing quietly, or, at most, kneeling occasionally, like the congregation in a Catholic church, the whole body of worshipers in a Greek church are in motion; bowing, prostrating themselves, waving the arms up and down, continually making the sign of the cross described above, they resemble a garden tossed by a great wind.—Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

There Was a Little Boy.

Tommy is fond of sugar and asks his mother for some to eat with his bread and butter. She refuses. He appears resigned, but adds gravely: "You know, mamma, what happened round the corner. There was a little boy, and his mother would not give him any sugar on his bread and butter, and—and—and next day he fell into the well."—Chicago Journal.

The Frenchman's Compliment.

A Frenchman of this city having received the photograph of a lady asked a friend what was customary under the circumstances. "Compliment it," replied the friend. "Tell her its beauty is very rare." "I beg to make zee acknowledgmong, madam," he said to her at their next meeting. "Zee beauty of madam is vair scarce."—Binghamton Republican.

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

The Story Told of Two Canadian Trappers. A Narrow Escape.

Once or twice he showed a curious reluctance about allowing a man to approach him suddenly from behind. Altogether his actions were so odd that I felt some curiosity to learn his history. It turned out that he had been through a rather uncanny experience the winter before. He and another man had gone into a remote basin, or inclosed valley, in the heart of the mountains, where game was very plentiful; indeed, it was so abundant that they decided to pass the winter there. Accordingly they put up a log cabin, working hard, and merely killing enough meat for their immediate use. Just as it was finished winter set in with tremendous snow storms. Going out to hunt, in the first lull, they found, to their consternation, that every head of game had left the valley. Not an animal was to be found therein; they had abandoned it for their winter haunts. The outlook for the two adventurers was appalling. They were afraid of trying to break out through the deep snow drifts, and starvation stared them in the face if they staid. The man that I met had his dog with him. They put themselves on very short commons, so as to use up their flour as slowly as possible, and hunted unweariedly, but saw nothing.

Soon a violent quarrel broke out between them. The other man, a fierce, sullen fellow, insisted that the dog should be killed, but the owner was exceedingly attached to it, and refused. For a couple of weeks they spoke no words to each other, though cooped in the little narrow pen of logs. Then one night the owner of the dog was wakened by the animal crying out; the other man had tried to kill it with his knife, but failed. The provisions were now almost exhausted, and the two men were glaring at each other with the rage of maddened, ravening hunger. Neither dared to sleep, for fear that the other would kill him. Then the one who owned the dog at last spoke, and proposed that, to give each a chance for his life, they should separate. He would take half of the handful of flour that was left and start off to try to get home; the other should stay where he was, and if he tried to follow the first he was warned that he would be shot without mercy. A like fate was to be the portion of the wanderer if driven to return to the hut. The arrangement was agreed to and the two men separated, neither daring to turn his back while they were within rifle shot of each other.

For two days the one who went off toiled on with weary weakness through the snow drifts. Late on the second afternoon, as he looked back from a high ridge, he saw in the far distance a black speck against the snow, coming along on his trail. His companion was dogging his footsteps. Immediately he followed his own trail back a little and laid in ambush. At dusk his companion came stealthily up, rifle in hand, peering cautiously ahead, his drawn face showing the starved, eager ferocity of the wild beast, and the man he was hunting shot him down exactly as if he had been one. Leaving the body where it fell, the wanderer continued his journey, the dog staggering painfully behind him. The next evening he baked his last cake and divided it with the dog. In the morning, with his belt drawn still tighter round his skeleton body, he once more set out, with apparently only a few hours of dull misery between him and death. At noon he crossed the track of a huge timber wolf; instantly the dog gave tongue, and, rallying its strength, ran along the trail. The man struggled after

At last his strength gave out and he sat down to die, but while sitting still, slowly stiffening with the cold, he heard the dog baying in the woods. Shaking off his mortal numbness, he crawled towards the sound, and found the wolf over the body of a deer he had just killed, and keeping the dog from it. At the approach of the new assailant the wolf sullenly drew off, and the man and dog tore the raw deer flesh with hideous eagerness. It made them very sick for the next twenty-four hours; but, lying by the carcass for two or three days, they recovered strength.—Theodore Roosevelt in The Century.

Should Recognize the Adornments.

I hope people will not become perfect. I hope there will always be weaknesses for us to smile at and sorrows for us to sympathize over. Weaknesses are the humor, the "badinage" of the Creator, and a perfect man is often a rather dull sermon. Now, madam, you are 50 years old, you have daughters who are mothers and sons who are fathers, and yet you take your little peep in the glass and fix your curls as you used to do thirty years ago, as you will do, I sincerely hope, thirty years from now. It is pretty, it is agreeable, is human and a compliment to the Creator that you should recognize the adornments he has placed within your reach.

You, sir, you ought to be taken home and fixed up. You are 50 years old, and your shirt front is all spotted, your waistcoat is not buttoned, your neckti'e is away round at the back of your head and your coat is covered with dust. Go home and put on a clean shirt and go down to the tailor's and order a suit of clothes that will fit you, and get your beard trimmed and look like a thing of taste if you can't be a thing of beauty. I think many men associate independence with dirt and think they would be losing some of their manliness if they wore decent clothes. But I don't want to reform those people. Well, I might wear better clothes myself, but that tailors have to pay rent and other little expenses.—San Francisco Chronicle "Undertones."

In the Exposition Gallery.

Said an old time resident of Chicago not long ago: "I have attended the exposition year after year since the first opening. During the first two or three years I used to go regularly and make one lap around the gallery, but until the other day I had not set foot in the exposition gallery for many moons. After this I shall never miss the trip, as it is well worth a visit. It is the territory of the genteel takir. In a brief walk of half an hour I had my catarrh completely cured five different times, and nearly choked myself on a piece of 'dog bread,' thinking it a sample of a new water cracker instead of a patent food for animals. I rested my weary arms by trying my son and heir on six different baby jumpers, and then I had my clothes soiled by three patent flour sifters. I had sixteen campaign badges offered to me at disgustingly low prices, and was weighed four times, losing about a pound each time. Seven times did I drop in a nickel to 'see it work,' and when I went down stairs I had my overcoat pockets chock full of samples of yeast cakes, baking powder, hair oil and liver pills. The man who visits the exposition and misses the gallery loses half his life."—Chicago Herald.

How Old She Was.

Old Friend (to old maid)—Didn't I understand you to say you were 28 years old?
Old Maid (indignantly)—No, sir; you did not. I never said it.
Old Friend—Never!
Old Maid—No, sir; never?
Old Friend (persistently disagreeable)—Think a moment. Don't you remember one morning, just fifteen years ago, you told it to me in a moment of confidence?—Washington Critic.

With Their Shoes On.

Five Kansas young ladies were recently caught in the middle of a long railroad bridge by a passenger train and forced to jump twenty feet into the water to save themselves. It would also be correct to state that it was a jump of ten feet.

Nature Is Kind.

People who eat garlic and smoke cigarettes, it is said, will never be attacked by yellow fever. Nature doesn't believe in piling on the agony.

Nobody has invented a contrivance whereby a man at the theatre can drop a cent in the slot and get a clove.

Cases of Homicidal Insanity.

"Have you had much experience with this form of insanity, doctor?"

"Many and many a case. I remember once being visited by a gardener. He told me that his niece kept house for him, and that as he had raised her he was very fond of her. One day he was filled with an impulse to drive a pitchfork through her neck. He was talking to her at the time and had the pitchfork in his hand. By a tremendous effort he refrained. Several times afterwards he felt the same desire coming over him, and each time it grew stronger, and at last he made a figure, with the neck and bust of straw. Whenever the desire to stick his niece in the neck with the pitchfork came over him he would rush out and stab the figure. I got him into an asylum and he was eventually cured.

"I remember another case where a man in Arkansas wrote me saying that one day while he was digging in the garden his little child came running out to play. As soon as he saw her a sudden desire to kill her with the spade came over him. He said the feeling was so strong that he had to tell the child to leave the garden. Afterwards he declared that he feared he would kill his family. I wrote him to go to an asylum immediately, because if he did not the mania would grow and he would certainly kill some one, in which event he would be morally as guilty as if he had planned the murder in his sober senses.

"The case of De Mallard, the Frenchman, is a noted one, and from the fact that the victims were all women it is peculiarly interesting. He used to advertise for servant girls. When they came he would lead them off to some secluded spot and murder them. There was no other object than a mad thirst for human blood. He is known to have murdered six women in this way, and is supposed to have killed many more whose bodies were never discovered. He was executed. The books are full of such cases, and they are not confined to men, either. Women have figured quite as prominently. One Frenchwoman, between 1833 and 1857, murdered over twenty people. She used poison in every instance, and her victims included relatives, neighbors, physicians and nuns. She attended a number of her victims while they were on their deathbeds and gave every evidence of being deeply affected. Perhaps she was. Of course she had no object except an insane desire to see people die.

"This mania is but one of a number, all of which are of the same general family. In some cases it is kleptomania, in others a mania for suicide, in others for murder, and so on."—Dr. William A. Hammond in New York World.

Paris Leads No Longer.

London, not Paris, now leads in matters of fashion both for men and women. When the Empress Eugenie left Paris and the republic took the place of the empire, the reign of the French as leaders of fashion ended. Mrs. Leslie is of this opinion, and her opinion is entitled to respect. She is a woman of fashion herself, although deeply immersed in business affairs, and is a close and keen observer. Moreover, she visits the European capitals annually, and thus has peculiar opportunity to form an opinion. She says: "The reign of Paris as fashion queen is over, and in my opinion will never return. Why? Because London and New York have obtained a supremacy which they will never relinquish. Finer dresses are made for court wear in London than anything now called for in Paris. For street wear who can equal an English ladies' tailor? And for gay attire, where harmony of colors is made a feature, American dressmakers and milliners take the lead of all others. Some charming bonnets, greatly admired in aristocratic London drawing rooms last spring, were made in Washington."

As to the "dowdy" appearance of Englishwomen in the public streets which some hypercritical writers have noticed, Mrs. Leslie explains: "It is deemed bad taste, immodest even, to display rich costumes to the common eye in public. Only to their peers in society do English high born ladies reveal the wealth and magnificence of their wardrobe. On a visit to a friend's house they appear each evening in a different toilet with jewels to match, and, favored by exceptional physiques that lend majesty to costliest costumes, and with a bloom and vigor far past the turning point in other women, our English aristocratic lady cousins are by no means second to the French."—Home Journal.

Dudes Among the Crows.

In personal appearance the Crow Indian men are fine looking—tall and well formed. The women are small and inferior in appearance, and are not as virtuous as other plains Indians. Their vocal language is coarse and harsh, and does not seem to have a rich vocabulary. They are poor in tradition. The men cut the hair squarely off round the forehead, leaving this bang from four to six inches in length, which, when in full dress, is made to stand upright by dressing it with clay, which is sometimes made more adhesive by admixture with a sticky substance obtained by boiling gummy weeds and bushes. The side hair is at times braided and the hair on the back of the head separated into several "strips," which are held in place by glue placed at regular intervals. To give them the appearance of very long hair, of which they are extremely proud, that which has been cut off in mourning, or that taken from their ponies' tails and manes, is glued on to lengthen it out. They do not pull out eyebrows or lashes. In dress the men wear the hooded coat made of blanket. At the shoulder, wrist of the coat and down the leggings a coarse fringe is fastened. The women wear short skirts made of raw material, and care little for colored ribbons or trinkets.—Fort Keogh (M. T.) Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

He Was Perfectly Satisfied.

The officer at the Third Street depot found two men jawing, and after sending one away said to the other:

"You are very foolish to get up a wrangle here."

"But he threatened to hit me on the snout!" protested the stranger.

"Yes, but what do you care?"

"I don't care about his threat, but it was his language. I protest against the term 'snout!'"

"He meant nose, I presume."

"I presume so, but why didn't he say so? That's what I was asking him, and that's what I want to know. He could have just as well told me in a quiet, genteel way that he would hit me in the nose, and he might even have hit me."

"Well, you'd better let him alone."

He didn't, though. He slipped away and renewed the controversy, and ten minutes later he came back with his nose knocked into the middle of last week and one eye closing.

"I told you," said the officer. "Are you satisfied now?"

"I am, sir. It's snout, and a mighty bad one!"—Detroit Free Press.

The Commodore's Chief Concern.

Commodore Vanderbilt was driving one day in Harlem lane, and as usual took the road, turning out for nobody. A very fast team came behind him, and the driver called on him to give room. Vanderbilt urged his horses forward and went straight on, believing he could not be passed. The other wagon dashed by, taking him on the wheel and throwing him out on his head. He was picked up insensible. It was feared at first that his neck might be broken. But he recovered in a few minutes and inquired of the anxious bystanders: "Did any of you boys notice whether that 'ere hoss was trottin' or runnin'?" His chief concern was to know if the horse that had gone by him had kept his gait.—Paul R. Cleveland in Cosmopolitan.

IMAGINARY DISEASE.

ILLS INTENSIFIED AND MORBID FANCIES HARD TO CURE.

Sufferings of the Confirmed Hypochondriac—Cancer and Heart Disease in the Mind—A Case in a New York Hospital. Cured in Fifteen Minutes.

The writer called on a number of prominent physicians and asked them if, among their patients, they had many who imagined they had diseases which they did not have. Some very interesting information was obtained. The doctors said it was found to be a very common trouble, and that the chief diseases these people imagine they have are cancer, heart disease and Bright's disease. In the language of the profession, the complaint is known as hypochondriasis.

It was found that the disease is often epidemic. At the time of Gen. Grant's sickness and death from cancer of the throat, and during the illness of the late Kaiser Friedrich, hundreds of people with nothing serious at all the matter with them called upon Dr. Shrady, who attended Gen. Grant, and told him they had cancer of the throat coming on and wished to be treated for it.

One celebrated physician, who made a special study of the disease, said that it was worthy of note that in all these cases the patient reasons correctly—that is, he draws just inferences from the error. Thus the Prince of Bourbon, when he supposed himself to be a plant, reasoned justly when he insisted upon being watered with the rest of the plants every day. In like manner, the hypochondriac who supposes himself to be dead reasons with the same correctness when he stretches his body and limbs on the bed or a board and assumes the stillness and silence of a dead man.

The following is from the records of one of the New York hospital's house surgeons:

"It was on July 6 that a man of small stature, who was found afterwards to be a shoemaker by trade, who was apparently about 40 years of age, escaped from his home and was running at large in the streets of the city, lacerating his flesh and beating his head against the sides of houses. A number of citizens managed to capture him, and they brought him to the hospital, followed by a big crowd. With his arms tied behind him, and in the greatest agony, his face bruised and swollen, his lips torn to pieces and streaming with blood, he was ushered into the hospital by those who had him in charge. I met them at the door and inquired into the case. The man was eager to tell his own story, but with difficulty collected words to convey it. His language was copious, but his agitation so great that he could hardly utter a sentence, being interrupted by constant efforts to tear his lips to pieces. Those with him knew nothing except that they had prevented him from beating out his own brains. At length he conveyed the information where his distress was, and upon which his mind was deluded. In his upper lip he said there was a worm gnawing his flesh and penetrating into his body, and unless he could tear it out the worm would soon be beyond his reach and inevitably destroy him. This was the cause of his misery. He was assured of the possibility of relief, and with a smiling countenance I patted him on the shoulder and bade him no longer be uneasy, for I would cut out the worm. His eyes sparkled, and in an instant he replied, 'Will you? Do it then. Do it, quick, for God's sake.'

"He was urged not to despair, for I was now ready to remove the insect preying upon his flesh. Accordingly, we went to the cells of the maniacs. When being seated he fixed himself for the operation. I paraded six lancets on the table before him. By making a display of this and other preparations and sending for assistance he became composed, waiting with patience the result. In the meantime I had sent in search of the worm. The person sent, being unsuccessful, stayed too long and I hurried out the door and picked from the ground one of the large worms or caterpillars which infested the poplar trees at that time and had fallen from the trees by the door. One end of the insect had been trodden upon, and it was nearly dead. This I got, and on returning found my patient's uneasiness increased. But upon seeing me take the instruments he fixed himself in the chair and requested my assistants, the apothecary and the orderly man, to hold his hands lest he should start while under pain of the cutting instrument.

"With a lancet the operation was begun. I pricked his lip with it, which made him flinch a little. He accordingly leaned back his head firmly against the person who stood behind him, and shut his eyes tightly, and thus fixed he bore the repeated pricks of the instrument with steadiness and fortitude. After pinching his lip with one hand and wounding it with the other, I cut off a portion of the upper lip which he had torn with his nails and which was pendulous. I now assured him that the operation was nearly completed, for the head of the worm could be seen. The bystanders cried out: 'There it is! there it is!' He raised eyes to see, but was cautioned to be still for one minute longer, at which he again shut his eyes. I then gave him a severe pinch, drew the edge of the lancet across the lacerated lip, and exclaiming, 'I've got him,' opened my hand and exposed the great worm.

"The man rose from his seat and gazed at the worm with astonishment beyond utterance. At length he spoke and requested me to preserve it, for, he observed with tranquility, his friends had said he was crazy, but this would be an evidence to the contrary.

"The result of this deceptive operation was a perfect cure, and this remarkable change was effected in less than fifteen minutes after the patient entered the hospital."

The best doctors say that the causes of the disease lie in conditions usually obscure, which lower the tone of the general health or depress the vitality of the brain, either by physical wear or mental worry. Disappointment, bad habits, want of proper mental occupation, often cause the trouble. The treatment consists in measures to improve the general health, especially a full diet, carefully selected; hydro-therapeutics, massage, gymnastics, horseback riding, walking, rowing, abundant and agreeable exercise in the open air, and the management of the patient's surroundings so as to lighten the mind and relieve from worry, perhaps by travel or sea voyage.

Argument is commonly worse than useless, but there should be a decided impression given that the generally morbid state is due to ill health. The risk of suicide is so small that restriction of liberty directed to its prevention does more harm than good.—William Henry Hawley in Boston Globe.

Fancy Leathers of Commerce.

The morocco leather of commerce is either goat or sheep skin. Goat skins are treated differently from the skins which make the thicker leather, being tanned with sumac, and all thicknesses of the leather being used. The skins of wool bearing animals, like the sheep, are commonly soft and spongy, and therefore unsuitable for shoes designed for rough wear, so the sheep skins are generally used for facings and linings. For our sheep skins we are indebted to Australia and South America, and they come to us by the way of England, where the wool is taken from them and the skin shipped to us as raw material. The various fancy leathers, such as alligator, seal and the like, are very often sheep and goat leather stamped and pressed to imitate the genuine article, and kangaroo leather, so far from gracing the back of the kangaroo, generally has no higher origin than the Spanish donkey.—Globe-Democrat.

Decrease of Indians.

A recent official publication estimates the average annual decrease of the Indians at nearly 2,000. Their present total number in the United States, exclusive of Alaska, is about 243,000.

MY GRAVE.

If, when I die, I must be buried, let
No crowd try engulf me; no lone spot
Where the great palpitating world comes not,
Save when, with heart bowed down, and eyelids wet,
It pays its last and melancholy debt
To some out journeying pilgrim.

May my lot
Be rather to lie in some much used spot,
Where human life with all its noise and fret
Throbs on about me.

Let the roll of wheels,
With all earth's sounds of pleasure, commerce, love,
And rush of hurrying feet, surge o'er my head.
Even in my grave I shall be one who feels
Close kinship with the pulsing world above
And too deep quiet would distress me, dead.
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox in Pittsburg Bulletin

Tooth Pulling by Electricity.

Boston people nowadays have their superfluous teeth drawn by means of electricity. Inasmuch as all new ideas in the arts and sciences are spread from this enlightened metropolis originally, and from hence extended over the country, there is little doubt that sooner or later this new method will supersede laughing gas and ether in other big cities of the Union. The process in question is very simple, scarce any apparatus being required beyond an ordinary two cell battery, with vibrator attachment. This attachment is a thin strip of metal, fastened at the ends, which is made to vibrate a thousand or more times per second by the electric current. At each vibration the circuit is ent off and renewed again, the effect being to give a perfectly steady flow of the mysterious fluid. In order to make sure that the flow is quite satisfactory the operator tunes the machine—assisted by a little reed tuning pipe—until the strip of metal sings "A." So far, so good.

Now to the battery are attached three wires. Two of them have handles at the ends, and the third is hitched to a forceps. The patient in the chair is given a handle to hold in each hand, and the current is turned on gradually until it becomes painful. Then he is told to grasp the handles as strongly as possible, the electricity—having been switched off for a moment—is turned on again suddenly, and the dental surgeon applies his forceps simultaneously to the tooth. The instant the molar is touched, it, as well as the parts surrounding, becomes electrified and absolutely insensible to pain. When it is withdrawn from the socket, the subject of the operation feels not the slightest disagreeable sensation. A jerk and the tooth is out, the patient drops the handles and the affair is over.—Boston Cor. Globe-Democrat.

Making Fine Grade Candies.

The process of making the "cream" is identical in both wholesale and retail establishments. Confectioners' sugar is first boiled until it becomes a thick and waxy syrup. It is then turned out on slabs and allowed to partially cool. In the retail establishments it is then worked with wooden paddles until the grain is so stretched that the mass is resolved into a soft, snowy compound, ready for the flavors or to be mixed with fruit or nuts. In the wholesale factories 160 pounds of clear syrup is turned out on a slab at one time. When it has cooled enough to work a candymaker stations himself at either end. He holds a common garden spade. Together the two workers turn and turn the hardening sugar until it is white. Then it is packed away in big iron receptacles and covered with heavy, wet cloths to keep it from hardening.

This cream is the basis of all the finest grade candies in the market. It is in the manufac

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1888.

The returns from all the townships but Main give Mr. Ikeler a majority of about 1200 for Judge. His majority in Montour county is 115, and he is therefore elected.

Montour county gave Cleveland 578 majority.

The inconsistency of the republicans of Columbia county was exemplified in their action in regard to the Judgeship. In their convention they were very careful to make the judicial office a political one, and to give the conferees positive instruction to vote for no one but a republican as a candidate for that office. But they had no sooner nominated Mr. Hinckley, who has heretofore been a bitter partisan, than they discovered that the judiciary should be entirely removed from politics, and on that ground appealed to democrats to support their nominee. If Mr. Hinckley ever had any chance of election he is indebted to the republican party for having removed all doubt as to the result of the contest, very early in the campaign.

Tuesday's Election.

PROBABLE DEFEAT OF CLEVELAND.

The Presidential contest of 1888 is over, and as the smoke of battle clears away it looks as though the Democracy has suffered a defeat. Of the doubtful states the republicans claim New York by 8000, and the democrats claim Indiana, Connecticut and New Jersey. However at midnight Tuesday the National Committee had not given up New York. In one dispatch Quay claimed New York by 30,000, Indiana by 10,000, Connecticut by 3000, and Virginia and West Virginia. The morning light cut the claim of New York down to 8000, and left all the others named in doubt. Another such a drop will change the result.

Here is the result in New York:

NEW YORK, November 6.—At midnight it appears that General Harrison has carried the State by from 8,000 to 10,000 plurality. The majority for Cleveland in New York city is about 57,000 and in Kings county about 12,000. The Democratic majority below the bridge is estimated at 72,000. The returns indicate that Harrison will have at least 80,000 above Harlem Bridge. Elmira, Albany and other cities show Democratic gains, but Harrison is making sweeping gains in the country and his election is now probable.

Six hundred and ninety-one districts in the State, outside of New York and Kings counties, give Cleveland 125,027; Harrison, 158,923: Fisk, 7,754. The same districts in 1884 gave Cleveland 117,894; Blaine, 143,926; St. John, 7,286.

The indications are at midnight that Hill is re-elected Governor. Grant is elected Mayor by 20,000 majority over Hewitt.

General Knapp claims 15,000 plurality for Harrison. The Tribune concedes Miller's defeat.

In New York city 839 districts out of 856 give Harrison, 102,470; C leveland, 158,290.

431 districts out of 2,108 outside of New York and Kings counties give Cleveland, 133,308; Harrison, 168,039; Fisk, 8,061. In 1884 these towns gave Cleveland, 125,634; Blaine, 152,690; St. John, 7,621. There is a Republican gain of 7,675.

The city complete for Mayor shows; Echardt, 67,721; Grant, 107,537; Hewitt, 68,134; Coogan, 9,465.

Brooklyn city complete gives Cleveland 79,736; Harrison, 68,197; Fisk, 1,005. Kings county complete gives Cleveland 82,447; Harrison, 70,587; Fisk, 1,035. Four years ago the figures were: Cleveland, 69,233: Blaine, 53,514; St. John, 1,361.

Elmira, Governor Hill's home, gives Cleveland a plurality of 311. This is a Democratic gain of 1,051 over 1884. Governor Hill has 665 plurality.

It has been impossible to get any information during the day, Wednesday, as there seems to be no news going over the wire. A private dispatch received at 3 p. m. says that the Philadelphia Times concedes Harrison's election and the New York Herald and Sun give New York to the Republicans, and the World says it is in doubt. On the other hand it was reported during the day that the democrats were claiming New York.

THURSDAY MORNING.—A dispatch from the New York Herald says that New York gives Harrison 13,000, and Indiana 2,000.

That Political Funeral.

Every active Chicago is again on hand with a sensation. This time it is a political speech made in a church at a funeral by a clergeman. The dead had been at one time assistant postmaster of the city and had been reduced to a chief clerkship and then suspended. The Rev. Dr. Lorimer saw fit to arraign the civil service system and to declare that "our ideal is still beyond our intellect, nor will justice and purity prevail in civil service until preferment shall be given upon a scale of talent or fitness."

If the orator made any attempt to show that by such a scale the dead man would have been advanced in office it is not reported, and this oration on the eve o a great political campaign can hardly be regarded as anything but a theatrical effort for effect not at all creditable to anyone concerned. The agitation of the audience is described as intense, and they even interrupted the speaker with cheers. Chicago is a remarkable city. Her spirit of enterprise extends even to the clergy and takes advantage of the operations of Death. Everybody knows that there is truth in the reflection "that our ideal is still beyond our intellect," as Dr. Lorimer rather vaguely if elegantly expressed it. We do not claim perfection in civil service reform or anything else, but nobody can deny that the present administration has made some effort in that direction, while the Republicans have never made any, and further, have never given evidence of the slightest intention that way.

If this assistant postmaster had been a Democrat in office and a Republican administration had come into power, nobody doubts that his official head would have been taken off at once. He would not have been given a chance as chief clerk, no matter how great his merit.—Lancaster Intelligencer.

Lord Sackville Was Snubbed.

MRS. CLEVELAND IS SAID TO HAVE DECLINED TO NOTICE HIS UNFORTUNATE DAUGHTERS.

There are many things to indicate that the position of Lord Sackville at Washington has been irksome to him for a long time, and that he has been far from satisfied with the icy formality with which he has everywhere been received almost since he came to this country. He is a strange man, with two idiosyncrasies that peculiarly unfit him for anything approaching popularity in this country. One is the exalted notion of the importance of family and title and the other a latitudinarian disregard of the conventionalities, especially those of the family life, that in this country, without an aristocracy to set a vicious example, are so pure and strong.

The present complication is really a social as well as a political one, and it will possibly be found in the end that the social aspect of the relation of Lord Sackville and his family with the President and members of the Cabinet and their wives may have led up to this climax. It is curious also that social questions have been involved in several of the changes that have taken place before in Lord Sackville's diplomatic life. Shortly after his appearance in Washington when it became known that his oldest daughter was coming over and would preside at his house, official society was staggered by the discovery that the young ladies were daughters of different mothers and that Minister West had never been legally married. This representative of the Queen with utter independence of the ordinary conventionalities while accepting and educating these daughters, born in the different countries where he had represented Her Majesty's government, had declined to recognize their mothers. As a result official society in Washington deliberated whether it could recognize either Minister West or the young ladies who, through no fault of their own, he had placed in this position.

The conclusion arrived at appears to have been to tolerate them and accept them "officially," but no further. At the reception which Minister West gave soon after his arrival Mrs. Hayes es consented to stand by the side of Mrs. West. Yet not then nor since has Minister West, or any member of his household, received, from any of the ladies of the successive Cabinets any such social place as was accorded, for instance, to Lady Thornton while there. Mrs. Garfield studiously ignored them. President Arthur, being a widower, was very friendly disposed, and his attentions to Miss West were at one time so marked as to be the occasion of much gossip at the capital.

With the advent of Mrs. Cleveland in the White House the social status of Minister West and the Misses West in official circles completely and wholly collapsed. She refused, peremptorily and uncompromisingly, to have anything to do with any of them socially. This was gall and wormwood to Lord Sackville, and it is undoubtedly owing to this circumstance more than to anything else that the Misses West take their departure for Europe. In this view of the case Lord Sackville's letter assumes the nature of a Parthian shot.—Philadelphia Times.

A Coincidental Return.

TWO FORMER BELLES OF WASHINGTON SOCIETY AGAIN AT THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—It is something more than twenty-five years since Mrs. Harriet Lane was dethroned from her position as the belle of Washington society and the first lady in the land, by the election of the first republican president. Of course, as everybody knows, she was the niece of President Buchanan, who afterward became Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson. As the acknowledged queen of the society of the capital she was succeeded by Miss Kate Chase, who married the brilliant Governor Sprague, of Rhode Island, and for years lived a life of sad notoriety with her husband. It is a coincidence worth mentioning, perhaps, that these two talented women, beautiful yet in their mature years, have both decided to take up their residence here for this winter. Mrs. Johnson has taken the house of Judge Leo Knott on K. Street, near Connecticut avenue, and Mrs. Sprague, whose legal name is again Miss Kate Chase, has rented the house of General Palmer. Both ladies will entertain, and their company will be much sought. Miss Ethel Sprague, eldest daughter of Miss Chase, has chosen the stage for her profession, and is now in New York studying for that purpose.

Another Dastardly Murder in the Coal Region.

A YOUNG CIVIL ENGINEER OF ST. CLAIR, FOUND DEAD BY THE ROADSIDE.

POTTSVILLE, Nov. 5—George Haines, a young civil engineer, a member of the Pennsylvania Schuylkill Valley Engineers' Corps, was found murdered on the road betwen St Clair and Port Carbon early this morning. The workmen who discovered his cold and blood-stained remains were on their way to Eagle Hill Colliery. The first to discover them were James Connell and his son, of Port Carbon. The morning was dark and the body lay directly across their path, which lay at the base of the culm heap from George W. Snyder's old colliery, at what is known as Mill Creek. The place is just midway between the towns of St. Clair and Port Carbon. The highway between the town is rather thickly built up, but at that point there is a big curve in the road, which runs around a spur of the mountain and is rendered quite narrow by a bend in the stream, the headwater of the Schuylkill River.

The Connells father and son discovered by the light of their lanterns that an ugly crime had been perpetrated.

They were unable to identify the victim. They made a close examination and found that bullets had penetrated his left breast and temple. His pockets were pulley out and were empty. While the startled men were observing these things John Reese, another miner, came up and identified the body as George Haines, of St. Clair. They carried the body a mile up the road to Haines mother's house, spreading an alarm of murder as they went along, thoroughly arousing the whole straggling community.

Haines for some months past has with his father been working on a contract to furnish mire timbers to the Henry Clay Colliery, and has been in the habit of coming home every Saturday night with his finance, Mary Williams, a young woman of twenty years, to whom he was to be married next month. It was his custom to remain until nearly two o'clock, when by walking smile and a half he could catch the train leaving Pottsville at 3 o'clock for Shamokin. When he bade Miss Williams good-bye this morning, he promised to see her on Tue day night when he came home to vote. He had not gone half a mile when he came to the loneliest part of the road, where his body was found before dawn.

Haines was an exceptionally modest, unobtrusive and gentlemanly young man. He was 25 years of age, and was not known to have an enemy.

There is no clue to the murderers. But one motive, robery, can be ascribed, as it was known that he often carried a large amount of money with him.

He had but $20 when he left, and the murderers stole this sum and his gold watch. There is a suspicion, however, that plunder may be a scheme to throw the police off the track. Coal and iron Policeman Christian and Titus are investigating every clue, and hope to run the guilty one down.

At the post-mortem made by Drs. A. P. and Charles D. Carr, it was found that the pistol by which the wounds were inflicted, was held so close as to burn the coat and skin. Either wound was necessarily fatal. The excitement of the people in the neighborhood is intense, and searching parties are organized to hunt the miscreants.

Has it Come to This?

CANADIAN CABINET OFFICERS COME TO ASSIST THE REPUBLICANS.

OTTOWA, Ont., Nov. 3.—There is considerable excitement here in political circles over the announcement in the Citizen, Government organ, this morning that three members of the Dominion Cabinet, Sir John Thompson, Minister of justice; Sir Adolphe Caron, Minister of Militia, and Hon. Geo. Foster minister of Finance, had left for New York last evening to witness, it is alleged, the Presidential election. The statement of the Citizen is full of significance. Members of the Cabinet, with the exception of Costigan, Minister of Inland Revenue, the irish-catholic representive in the Ministry, are known to be in sympathy with the republican party as true friends to England and Canada, and it is reported here to-day that an assurance has been given that if Harrison is returned a fishery treaty will be arranged with Great Brittain as one of the first measures by which all friction between the two countries will be removed. The Government press throughout the country are most severe in denouncing Cleveland as the enemy of all that is British, and hoping that Harrison will be returned. The Free Press here calls the three members of the Cabinet who are now in New York to task for neglecting their official duties at Ottawa to witness, as the Citizen mildly puts it, the Presidential election. It is not believed, however, that their presence in New York can have any material effect on the result, although the principal is condemned.

Assaulted Two Girls.

A TERRIBLE CRIME PERPETRATED BY THREE COLORED MEN.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 5.—The community of Webster Groves, a suburb of St. Louis, was wrought up to a terrible pitch of excitement to-day over a dastardly attempt at criminal assault made last night by three negroes named Grant Boyd, Will Stringer and Coon Rhodes, on Alice and Emma Baker, daughters of Greenville Baker, a well known citizen. Boyd and Rhodes were arrested and taken before Judge Coffe this morning. Alice Baker was called on by the judge to identify her assailants and did so, and, pointing at Rhodes, said: "There is the man who threw me down." She had scarcely ceased speaking when her father sprang to his feet, and drawing a revolver, fired point blank at Rhodes, the bullet grazing his head. The father was seized and prevented from doing farther harm. The negroes in the meantime having fallen on their knees and began to pray piteously for mercy. Two revolvers were found on Mr. Baker and he evidently intended to kill both of the negroes. Rhodes and Boyd were bound over and taken to the county jail at Clayton.

Catarrh

May affect any portion of the body where the mucous membrane is found. But catarrh of the head is by far the most common, and the most liable to be neglected. It cannot be cured by local applications. Being a constitutional disease it requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, working through the blood, eradicates the impurity which causes and promotes the catarrh, and soon effects a permanent cure. At the same time Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up the whole system, and makes one feel renewed in strength and health. If you suffer from catarrh, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Ringing Noises Impure Blood

"I used Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh, and received great relief and benefit from it. The catarrh was very disagreeable, especially in the winter, causing constant discharge from my nose, ringing noises in my ears, and pains in the back of my head. The effort to clear my head in the morning by hawking and spitting was painful. Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me relief immediately, while in time I was entirely cured. I am never without the medicine in my house as I think it is worth its weight in gold." MRS. G. B. GIBB, 1029 Eighth St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

GEORGE A. CLARK, P. M.

The campaign is over, and both parties can congratulate themselves that it has been an unusually clean one. There were no personalties in it, and much less bitter feeling was engendered than is usual in a Presidential year. Business will settle down to its normal condition now, and the world will move right on just the same as though there had been no election. Politics is a queer thing.

Charles Armstrong was struck in the head with a stone while in Danville last Saturday night and badly cut. He was on his way to the depot after the parade, and had just left Mill street to go up the track, when without cause or provocation a stone was thrown by a cowardly and malicious hand with the above result. William Boice of this town says that he saw a man named Forney of Danville, throw it. Such a man ought to be arrested and punished to the full extent of the law.

At the preacher's meeting in Danville, Pa., a few weeks ago a circular letter was read and endorsed by all the preachers, addressed to the Bishop of the A. M. E. Zion church calling his attention to the demoralizing and Sabbath desecrating institution called a camp meeting, held every year at Rupert, mostly in the interest of a few white men and the railroad company. The letter was read before the conference and the Bishop denounced such so called campmeetings and pronounced against holding any more meetings at the above named place. Certainly the whole Christian community should say amen.

G. W. STOCKEY.
Sec'y. Preacher's Meeting.

A large audience greeted the Rinehart-Delhauer company of comedians at the Park last night in Puddle's Pond. If a play can be gauged by the applause it creates Puddles' Pond is a howling success. It was a succession of encores and laughs from beginning to end, and when Delhauer the frog appeared the applause was deafening. That the people were satisfied does not express it; as the antics of the frog continued expressions of "wonderful," "impossible," very audible, oh's," &c. were heard on every side. His performance has never been equalled in this city. It is plainly evident to the most obtuse why this strangely constituted man has no imitator. There could be no two such. Miss Beatrice Rinehart as Peetie made a pleasant impression, she has a beautiful soprano voice of rare power and volume and handles it with the easy assurance made of a true artist. Her dancing was wonderful, and has never been equaled in this city. The rest of the cast is far above the average. There is no question about the success of Puddle's Pond. It is great go; from the reading of Mother Crimmins' prophecy till the king frog meets his death at the hands of pretty little Pansy the interest never slacks.—New Castle, (Pa.) Courant, Sept. 21st, 1888.

Bloomsburg Opera House, Monday evening, Nov. 12.

William Cole was stricken with paralysis on Tuesday of last week, and died on Thursday morning. He was buried at Coles Creek on Saturday morning. His age was sixty years, and he leaves a wife and several children. For twenty-three years Mr. Cole has kept the popular resort at the foot of the North Mountain in Sullivan county, just above Central in Sugarloaf township of this county. Trout fishing parties from far and near, have been his guests, and he was well known by many people. One end of his house was used as a "register" and hundreds of names of persons who have stopped there are written thereon. Mr. Cole had always enjoyed good health and his death was a sudden blow to his family.

Jamison City.

On Thursday afternoon of last week, a car load of excursionists went up the B. & S. to Jamison City. Col. Corcoran, Mr. Bubb, Mr. Merriman and several other gentlemen from Williamsport, and about thirty from Bloomsburg constituted the party. The tracks of the B. & S. railroad are laid to Jamison City, and the train ran up to the end of the tracks What was but a few weeks ago the farm of Mrs. Roberts, is now a busy scene. The railroad depot is nearly completed, and is large and convenient, with a wide platform entirely around it. Upon the hill overlooking the town workmen are employed excavating for the foundation of the new hotel which is to be erected by a stock company formed mostly in Bloomsburg. It is to be a fine building with all modern conveniences and to cost about $6000. As a summer resort it is destined to become a popular place. A large boarding house is nearly completed, and the foundations are laid for the large saw mill of Corcoran, Richards & Co. The machinery of the mill is on the ground ready to be placed in position, and men are already at work in the woods getting out logs. A tannery and a hub factory will soon be erected. On the opposite side of the creek Dr. Edwards has a saw mill in operation.

The town has been divided into lots, and a number of them have been sold. Col. John Jameson and A. L. Fritz Esq. have the matter in charge, and anyone desiring to purchase can see the draft of the town, and make their selections. A large number of workmen will be employed in the several industries about to be started there, and many houses will be required to accommodate them. The lots are selling at a low figure now, and it looks like a good investment, as they are sure to increase in price soon.

A new era has dawned on the upper end of the county, and we expect to see a thriving and prosperous village at Jamison City in a few months.

Bad Silver Dollars.

DANGEROUS COUNTERFEIT CIRCULATED IN WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

The Pittsburg Commercial Gazette says: The counterfeit silver dollar has again made its appearance in some of the towns of Pennsylvania, near the New York state line, and also just within the counties along the boundaries of that state. United States Detective McSweeney left for the upper oil country on Saturday, but he refused to talk about the object of his mission to the locality. He acknowledged that counterfeit coin was being circulated in various parts of the state but he would not state whether he had any knowledge of the identity of the persons who were making and circulating the bogus money. He said, however, that highly important developments might be expected in about two weeks.

It was learned from another source that Chief Bell, of the secret service department, had detailed four men to look after a number of Pennsylvania counterfeiters who were circulating bogus silver dollars in Buffalo, Erie, Jamestown, N. Y., Corry, Pa., Oil City, and among farmers who resided in the vicinity of these towns and cities. The counterfeit, it is said, is the finest ever turned out of an illegal mint in this country. It is the exact weight, perfectly moulded, and could only be distinguished from the genuine by experts. The greasy appearance so apparent in other bogus coins is absent in the latest issue.

These coins are differently dated, but they are both of the same issue. The change in dates was done for the purpose of more readily deceiving trades people. The factory where this dangerous queer is turned out is supposed to be in the neighborhood of Girard, Pa., but on this point the secret service officers are very reticent.

East Benton.

Every dollar that finds lodgment in my pocket is like so many greedy fishes, that every alluring object and tempting bait they jump at, and strange to say every one of them gets caught.

Closing scenes of the campaign and enthusiasm holding full sway. George W. Sterner and Francis Heck addressed a large and enthusiastic democratic meeting at Bendertown last Wednesday evening. The school house was crowded to its utmost capacity and scores could not enter to find even standing room. The issues of the tariff were fully and ably discussed and some got their eyes opened and voted accordingly. The New Columbus band enlivened the occasion with excellent music.

A large and handsome hickory pole between 70 and 100 feet in length was raised at the forks between Barthol Kearhoof and Clarence Albertson on Thursday afternoon. The sturdy yeomanry of Benton and Sugarloaf turned out en masse and "blooming beauty" stood all around which was a good sprinkling of patriotic and democratic ladies who witnessed with smiling approbation the raising of the mammoth pole. Hervey E. Smith was the orator of the hour and dealt a death dealing blow to waning republicanism in this part of the political vineyard. Everywhere there seems to be but one sentiment in regard to the public welfare and that is tariff reform. But ere this appears in print the issue will have been decided by the people of the nation.

Dr. Davidson and George Cary of Cambra have a peculiar bet on the election. If Cleveland is elected the former must wheel the latter on a wheelbarrow from Cambra to C. C. Hughes' with such mottoes and decorations as the latter may adopt. If Harrison is elected vice versa.

Killed and Placed on the Track.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 4.—Train hands on train 289 on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, when a short distance above Sugar Notch this morning, discovered the body of a man lying on the track. The train was stopped before reaching him and he was picked up. On examination he was found to have died from injuries about the head, indicating that he had been beaten to death with a club and then placed upon the track to conceal the crime. From papers found upon his person he is believed to be Wm. Lameraux, of Creasy.

There is no more fruitful source of disease than vitiated blood. It involves every organ and function of the body, and if not immediately corrected by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, sooner or later leads to fatal results. Be warned in time.

Parade at Danville.

A large excursion party went to Danville on Saturday night to take part in the Democratic parade at that place. There were 571 tickets sold here, and a number were taken on at Rupert and Catawissa. The procession as it left here was headed by Gilmore's Band, after which came about 50 business men with black silk hats, under the marshalship of W. B. Taylor. Then came the Bloom Band followed by the Cleveland and Thurman Club with white hats, capes and torches, marshalled by Capt. U. H. Ent. At Danville the Bloomsburg visitors were put at the head of the procession. The town was brilliantly illuminated, and red fire was burned along all the streets. There were said to be 1000 footmen and 250 horsemen in the line. It was the biggest parade of the campaign in this section. The Northumberland club with two bands also took part.

It was half past twelve when the train returned, and being Sunday morning the party dispersed in an orderly manner, without music from the bands.

Taken From the Grave.

A BODY RESURRECTED TO SATIAFY AN INSURANCE COMPANY.

On October 7th, George Shebinski called at the home of his son-in-law to congratulate his daughter and her husband on the advent of a little stranger in their midst, a prospective christening looming up in the distance and a jolly time in general. The father left the bedside of his daughter, wreathed in smiles. He turned to look once more upon her happy face, took a step backward and disappeared down the stairway with a scream and a crash. The man was picked up badly injured, put to bed and Dr. McWilliams summoned. The latter found the skull of the unfortunate man fractured. He called Dr. Maurer in consultation and the two decided it was necessary to trephane. The family objected to the operation and October 10 the man died His life was insured in an accident company. A point was raised as to whether his death was the result of an accident. It was a question of money. As a result of this dilemma, Drs. McWilliams and Maurer went to the cemetery, the body was disinterred, the top of his skull taken off and the evidence that death resulted from a blood clot, brought about by the fracture discovered.—Shamokin Dispatch.

Manor Rest Inn Company.

A meeting of stockholders of the proposed hotel at Jamison City was held at the office of Samuel Neyhard on Saturday evening, Nov. 3. An organization was affected by the election of W. R. Tubbs, President, Geo. E. Elwell, Secretary, and A. L. Fritz, Treasurer. The following board of directors was elected: Geo. E. Elwell, H. J. Conner, Mathias Shaffer, J. K. Lockard, John Jameson, W. R. Tubbs, A. L. Fritz. W. R. Tubbs, H. J. Conner and J. K. Lockard were appointed a building committee. The name adopted for the corporation is the Manor Rest Inn Company. Adjourned to meet Thursday Nov. 8, at 7:30 p. m.

Divide the Voting Districts.

There are about twelve hundred voters registered in Bloomsburg. This indicates a population of 6000, as against 3800 in 1880, which shows how rapidly the town is growing, and also proves the necessity for more polling places. There were 947 votes cast on Tuesday, and the election boards did not get through with the count until long after midnight. No district should contain over 300 voters, and a less number would be still better. Four polling places in Bloomsburg would not be too many, and the necessary steps should be taken to divide the present districts.

Literary Notes.

BOOK NEWS (John Wanamaker, Philadelphia), for November begins with an article by Rev. E. E. Hale on "Chautauqua Literature," which cannot fail to please those who are interested in this admirable course of self-instruction. This is followed by an account of the historian, John Bach McMaster, whose portrait accompanies the number. There is the usual discourse on the books of the month, by Mr. Talcott Williams, other good reviews and miscellany, and at the end of the magazine is a list of announced books that gives a glimpse of the Christmas books in store for us.

Sale of Horses.

There will be a public sale of horses and mares at the Exchange Hotel Saturday, commencing at ten o'clock. These are all young, some of them being with foal from the Norman horse. It is a rare opportunity to buy. Come and see them.

During a recent trip to Mt. Carmel we met a number of former residents of Bloomsburg and vicinity. Joseph Menagh has a jewelry store, Henry Kleim a drug store and J. A. Doran a tailor shop. Dr. D. T. Kreb, formerly of Lightstreet, enjoys a good practice, and W. A. Weidensaul formerly of Centralia is the proprietor of the Mt. Carmel House, an excellent hotel. John Brofee, the postmaster, was formerly a resident of Locust township.

Maniac Cured by Prayer.

The faith-cure people have been holding meetings during the past week on Eagle street, near Cedar, with extremely satisfactory results. Mrs. Barrington, wife of a Jamestown furrier, announced her entire recovery from insanity, in answer to prayer. A mad desire to kill herself had taken possession of her. Failing in several other attempts she purchased a ten pound canister of powder, laid a train across the floor of a room, lighted it, and knelt down over the cannister with her face touching it. In a few seconds the explosion came. It did not kill her, strange to say, but hurled her out of doors and disfigured a portion of her face. Friday a representative of Truth saw her. "Yes, I have been cured in answer to prayer," she said simply. "I am rational now. See here is the mark of the wound made by the explosion." Mrs. Barrington herself has no doubt of the genuineness of her cure.—Buffalo Truth.

WANAMAKER'S.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, Nov. 5, 1888.

We were never so well fixed to show Black Dress Goods, Never so many to show—sorts and quantities.

Take Black Silk-Warp Henriettas, the best (Priestley's of course). Ask for any number in the long line. Where else can all of them be had? If you have a silk-and-wool in mind, get the best. It's cheapest in the long run. Any best, so long as you pay for quality, is cheapest; doubly true of a silk-and-wool. These choicest Henriettas are made of strictly pure silk and the very finest quality Australian wool. They go in the natural gray to the dye-vats and come out black of a uniform shade.

A new feature in these Henriettas are 50 and 76 inch widths for Cloaks, Wraps and Shawls. They match the dress goods exactly in shade.

We have had a line of All Wool Black Henriettas with extra heavy warp made for our special trade. This adds body, weight, and firmness to the goods. 46 inches wide, $1 to $1.50; lighter warp, 75c.

All Wool Black Cashmeres. Old-fashioned stuffs that are always good, desirable and quick. For less than ever.

Camel Hair has come back to be one of the most fashionable of Blacks for ladies' wear. The sharp turn to it has been within a month or so. Too good a stuff to be given the go by. Take a first-class Camel Hair (say Priestley's or Lupinis) and it softens and betters with wear almost to the end, Four makes on our counters, 65c to $3.50.

Black All-Wool Serges come to us under a dozen or twenty names, French, German American. Various twills and many widths, 50c to $1.25.

As many more widths and qualities come in the soft twills known as Chuddas. 50c to $1.50.

Black Novelty Goods from Paris in blocks, stripes, plaids, and figures. Beyond your patience to count.

The new and popular Black Side-Band stuffs for robes.

Soutache Braided Robes, $7 to $16.50.

Second Mourning Stuffs for Dresses — mixtures, plaids, stripes. 50c to $1.50.

Only the best makes of Nun's Veilings— Priestley's silk-warm and Lupin's all-wool—three inch borders. 75c to $5.

Veils, ready made, woven border all around, go by a dozen steps to $14.

There isn't such another gathering of Dress Stuffs under any roof in America. There are stuffs as fine, plenty of lower grade; but there isn't another store that keeps the variety in every grade from barely useful to rich, and where prices are so sure to be in the lowest nick.

Here's a line of Ladies' Suitings that will do to measure the whole stock by. Standard goods. Checks, small plaids—mostly invisible—dainty hair-line stripes. 52 inches wide, and A1 for style, wear and weight, and the colors include a brownish a greenish a grayish — a bluish a garnetish an olivish

each in a great variety of modest combinations. This is the price scale;

Ten $1 styles at 75 cents
Twenty six $1.50 styles at $1
Twenty $1.75 styles at $1.50.

The new lots have just been opened; the new prices began at the same time. Without a whisper customers were quick to find them out.

Thanksgiving-Day Proclamation.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER TWENTY-NINTH, DESIGNATED BY PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.

WASHINGTON, NOV. 1.—The following proclamation was issued to-day:

A PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Constant thanksgiving and gratitude are due from the American people to Almighty God for his goodness and mercy which have followed them since the day he made them a nation and vouchsafed to them a free Government. With loving kindness he has constantly led us in the way of prosperity and greatness. He has not visited with swift punishment our shortcomings, but with gracious care he has warned us of our dependence upon his forbearance, and has taught us that obedience to his holy law is the price of a continuance of his precious gifts.

In acknowledgement of all that God has done for us as a nation, and to the end that on an appointed day, the united prayers and praise of a grateful country may reach the throne of grace, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the 29th day of November inst., as a day of Thanksgiving and prayer, to be kept and observed throughout the land.

On that day let all our people suspend their ordinary work and occupations, and in their accustomed place of worship, with prayer and songs of praise, render thanks to God for all his mercies, for the abundant harvests which have rewarded the toil of the husbandman during the year that has passed, and for the rich rewards that have followed the labors of our people in their shops and their marts of trade and traffic. Let us give thanks for peace and for social order and contentment within our borders, and for our advancement in all that adds to national greatness. And mindful of the afflictive dispensation with which a portion of our land has been visited, let us, while we humble ourselves before the power of God, acknowledge his mercy in setting bonds to the deadly march of pestilence, and let our hearts be chastened by sympathy with our fellow-country-men who have suffered and who mourn.

And as we return thanks for all the blessings which we have received from the hands of our Heavenly Father, let us not forget that he has enjoined upon us charity; and on this day of thanksgiving let us generously remember the poor and needy, so that our tribute of praise and gratitude may be acceptable in the sight of the Lord.

Burdette is There.

THE JOKER OF THE AMERICAN PRESS FILLS THE PULPIT IN THE BEST MANNER.

Mr. Robert J. Burdette made a few remarks last week to encourage the Beth Eden Christian Endeavor Society, which held its first anniversary in the church, Broad and Spruce Streets, Philadelphia. Mr. Burdette told them he hadn't prepared anything to say, for he'd been out of doors a good deal lately building a henhouse that was a thing of beauty, architecturally speaking, after he had persuaded it to stand up, and then made some observations on hens in general, and some other topics, all calculated to make life a pleasant thing to his hearers. He read some of these observations from newspaper clippings that he had cut out and then put them at one side of the pulpit, telling the congregation in confidence that next Sunday, when Mr. Beckley, the pastor, was making a bulletin board of himself he might mistake one of the clippings for a notice and read it. He (Mr. Burdette) didn't think it would do any harm if he did. When he began to talk about Christian Endeavor societies this is the substance omitting the digression from the subject, of what he said:

"There never was a pastor who was at a loss to find work for his young people to do and you never saw a Sunday school where the teachers lacked work. And to prepare the young people, to teach them how to do church work, is the good thing these societies do. A zealous man may unmeaningly do a great deal of mischief from ignorance of the right way to work. I can't advise you how to do your work, for I grew up without the advantages of information on these societies. I'll illustrate what I mean by these advantages.

"When I gave up being a trustee of a church, because trustees don't have anything to do, and became a deacon, I made up my mind to do something. I decided to look out for the strangers who might attend the services and took a back seat on Sunday morning. An old man came in. I wasn't very well acquainted with the members, but I was sure he was a stranger. I took him by the arm to show him to the pew of a man I felt sure wasn't coming that day. I didn't know whose pew it was, but it was a good one, well forward. The elderly stranger seemed bashful, and didn't want to go way up there—wanted to slip into a side pew—but I made him go along with me, and seated him, gave him a hymn book upside down at a random page. I noticed some people smiling, but I thought it was only at my awkwardness, for I wasn't used to showing strangers to seats. I hardly heard a word of the sermon for thinking what a good piece of church work I'd done to start on.

"And that man was the very oldest member of the congregation. He was being baptised into that church about the time I was being born."

The rest of Mr. Burdette's remarks were rather discursive and irrelevant, and once, when he was illustrating a point, he whistled hymn tunes in the pulpit, but the congregation did not object.

Addresses were also made by Albert Magilton, president of the society, and John T. Beckley, pastor of the church. Miss Kate Shesin, Mrs. A. Bisbee, Mr. H. A. Darby and Mr. C. Taylor sang quartettes and solo music.

One Fact

Is worth a column of rhetoric, said an American statesman. It is a fact, established by the testimony of thousands of people, that Hood's Sarsaparilla does cure scrofula, salt rheum, and other diseases or affections arising from impure state or low condition of the blood. It also overcomes that tired feeling, creates a good appetite, and gives strength to every part of the system.

Stranger Than Enoch Arden.

A MAN SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN MURDERED RETURNS TO HIS FAMILY AFTER AN ABSENCE OF THIRTY-TWO YEARS.

A sensation was created in Owensboro, Ky., last week, by the announcement of the arrival of a former citizen, Berra Spurrier, of whom nothing has been heard for thirty two years. Spurrier was the son of a noted Methodist minister and had a splendid education. At an early age he married well, and life was very bright for him.

One morning he left home to go to a neighboring town, promising to be back at night. He did not return. A week later his coat was found torn to pieces and it was noised about that he had been murdered. Two weeks later the suspected man was seen riding the horse that Spurrier had ridden away. The body was not found, however, and no arrests were made.

The suspected murderer died a few months later under suspicion, and it was said made a confession of murder to his physician. Twenty years later a brother of the missing man received a letter from him. The brother tried to keep the receipt of the letter a secret, but a boy caught sight of it and walked twenty miles to inform the deserted wife and children of the matter. The brother was immediately besieged about it, but he denied the letter or that he knew anything of the wanderer.

A year later, on a bed of sickness, he confessed that he knew of his whereabouts. He said that Spurrier made a great stake in St. Louis, and had finally settled down in Hickory county Mo., subsequently removing to St. Joseph, where he embarked in business under an assumed name. He was highly successful, and was wealthy at the time of the writing of the letter by which the clew was obtained by his family. His oldest son at that time set on foot an investigation of the matter, but being apprised of the search he suddenly closed out his business and disappeared. This was twelve years ago.

People were found in St. Joseph who knew a portion of his history, but all traces of him were lost and never a word was heard from him until his arrival home. He brings with him evidence of wealth, and says he has come back to redress as far as possible the wrongs inflicted by his heartless desertion. His wife, left with a family of small children, struggled along and brought them up respectably, though always poor. They are now good citizens, and the wife, nearly 70 years of age, has been tenderly cared for by her children. A reunion of all their children, six in number, was held, and the sequel of the unhappy story promises to be as pleasant as if it had been so ordered by the veriest writer of fiction in the land.

A Bear at a Quilting.

BRUIN CREATES AN UNEXPECTED SENSATION AND IS LAID OUT BY A WOMAN.

Last Saturday Nov. 3rd there was a quilting bee at John Holiday's. Quilting bees are great occasions in the mountains, and all the women within a radius of fifteen miles usually gather at them. This was a big one. Mrs. Holiday's hospitality was renowned throughout her section. The older children—boys aged 11 and 9—were off at work with their father. The four younger were banished to the little low upper room under the roof, reached by a ladder. There they amused themselves as best they could, while about thirty congregated about the quilting frame below, and labored assiduously at sewing and exchanging the news of the neighborhood. Mrs. Holiday made frequent trips to the little kitchen, where a savory dinner was preparing.

It lacked about an hour of noon. The conversation of the "quilters" had become very lively, and their laughter could be heard to the edge of the clearing. Then there was a heavy thump overhead. "What's that?" exclaimed one of the women.

"Only one of them children tumbled over on the floor above." said Mrs. Holliday; "you needn't mind 'em."

Probably they would have continued their quilting, but "them children" began to scream and one after another they came tumbling down the ladder. The last was the youn est — a little girl. She was only 4 years old, and she did "tumble down," falling through the trap door to the floor, but she was so fat that her fall didn't hurt her. She failed to bring with her the larger part of her pinafore, but her mother didn't have time to notice that, for the next moment a big black bear popped through the opening right after the children. He turned a somersault as he fell, but he held in his claws the missing portion of the baby's pinafore.

Some of the women screamed and rushed for the door. These were the younger ones. The older had steadier nerves. They had lived in the mountains all their lives; they had seen bears before. The children were seized by them, while Mrs. Holiday ran to the smoke house, where her husband had left his rifle that morning after cleaning it out.

Somebody might have been hurt, but the bear was slightly stunned by his precipitous descent, and when he recovered consciousness nobody was within easy reach. The savory smell of the cooking dinner attracted him and he pushed his way into the little kitchen. A piece of fat mutton was boiling in a kettle over the fireplace, for Mrs. Holiday had not yet bought a stone. Bruin made for it and burnt his nose. While he was growling and rubbing his paws over his nose Mrs. Holsday poked the rifle in through the small window and shot him dead.

The bear had been wandering along the cliff above the house. His explorations led him near the edge and he lost his footing and tumbled over and struck on the cabin below. The light boards gave way and he fell right into the group of children. They scattered and the bear, following, tumbled down the ladder which served as a stairway. He was the first bear seen this season in this part of Kentucky and weighed nearly 400 pounds.

UNSCRUPULOUS DRUGGISTS have vainly tried to create the impression with the public that worthless and often dangerous imitations are identical with POND'S EXTRACT. It would be as reasonable to believe that a brass counterfeit is identical with a gold dollar. POND'S EXTRACT and "Witch Hazel" are not one and the same thing Beware of imitations. Wise men are not tricked in buying spurious articles, falsely represented as "just the same" or "equally the good" as POND'S EXTRACT.

Made Blood on the Sea.

Mr. George Roy, officer of the watch on board the Maggie C. Moore, is our authenticity for the following remarkable incident which occurred on the morning of 10th inst., about 700 miles north-northwest of Cape Flattery. He states that the attention of the crew was simultaneously directed or attracted to the existence of blood floating on the adjacent sea. Speculation was rife as to the immediate origin of so strange a spectacle, and a careful watch was kept to ascertain it.

Eventually it was found that a whale was blowing and spouting on the lee side of the schooner, where the blood was first noticed, and a partial solution to the phenomenon was gained when a swordfish darted up close, and following that terror of the seas came the enemy of whaledom, the thrasher (or killer, as the fish is sometimes designated). The thrasher sprang from the water some ten feet into the air, and with a penetrating crash alighted upon the whale. A fierce conflict ensued, and the result was that the whale appeared to be exhausted from the attack the thrasher made upon him. Recovering himself, however, the whale, after several efforts, succeeded in diving below, and came up on the starboard side of the schooner. The crew then took their whaling iron and struck at the thrasher, but unfortunately did not hit on a vital part. The thrasher, following the whale, made another savage attack on his victim, and hit for a second time within the sight of the crew. The whale appeared at this juncture to be in extremities, and the swordfish, realizing the position, made a further attack at this common enemy and stabbed the Jonah-swallowing monster.

All was now over; the whale's remaining strength was gone, and he was compelled to succumb to his fate with the grace of a doubly assailed warrior of the deep. After the death he floundered "topsy turvey," and the thrasher was observed to be luxurating on the choicest parts of the conquered dead. This is no mythical story of the sea, but an incident of peculiar interest to those who realize the hostility existing between the thrasher and the whale and the characteristics of the swordfish. The latter knows no danger. He does not discern between a floating hull and a buoyant whale. His sword is bound to penetrate either at all hazards and risks to himself, and in this respect he is similiar to some misguided non-amphibious creatures.

A Touching Scene.

A touching scene was witnessed recently in front of the Chambers Street Police Station, in New York. As a prisoner, clad in most ragged clothes, was being led to the police van a little yellow dog bounded up to him, wagging his tail, and joyfully frisked all around him. The first sight of the dog brought the prisoner to a dead standstill. But he was promptly hustled on and the dog trotted along close to his heels. As the fellow mounted the steps on the "Maria" he cast a farewell look at the dog. The dog though, was going to, and up he leaped to the step after his master, but an officer pushed him off, clapped the doors together and locked them. The little animal yelped and moaned piteously, gazed imploringly into the faces of the officers, first of one, then of the other, wagging his tail and begging in moans to be let into the conveyance. But the driver out the scene short by whipping up the horses, and away whirled the Black Maria with the little yellow dog bounding along behind.

What men want is not talent, it is purpose; not the power to achieve, but the will to labor.

A year of pleasure passes like a fleeing breeze, but a moment of sorrow seems an age of pain.

Some men are always looking back to the time of their conversion, instead of forward to their duty.

People Pay Heavy Bills

For medical attendance and medicine. Sickness is expensive, and those with small incomes feel this burden keenly. The physician must sometimes be called but he is not needed one-tenth as often as many think. What is required is a family medicine; one that will relieve and cure those ailments which are liable to come at any season and to attack both sexes and all ages. Amid the host of articles that are offered to the public for this purpose nearly all are useless or worse than useless. It is no vain boast to say that the medicine herein mentioned is of a very different character. What it has done is known to multitudes of persons whom it has cured of weary and painful diseases. It has saved time, money and many dear and precious lives. Now please understand that as the life is in the blood so disease and death are in the blood. Get the poison out of the blood and life and health at once return to every part of the body. Dr. Brown's Sarsaparilla does this work quickly and surely through its direct and positive action upon the stomach, bowels, kidneys, liver and skin. For all waste and corrupt elements must be cast off by means of those channels. Rheumatism, scrofula, bronchitis, gout consumption, malaria, catarrh, hay fever, all skin affections and eruptions are diseases of the blood.

Mr. Geo. H. Wish, of the firm of Thaxter & Wish, Bangor, Me., was afflicted with a scrofulous humor which caused troublesome sores upon both his legs. Many remedies were used and several physicians consulted, without result. After taking Brown's Sarsaparilla a short time he was better, and soon the eruptions disappeared and he is now all right. This is only one of a thousand victories gained by is offered by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for a case of Chronic Nasal Catarrh which they cannot cure.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH.—Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery, and inflamed; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a nasal twang; the breath is offensive; smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. Only a few of the above-named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, or less understood by physicians. By its mild, soothing, and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases of Catarrh, "Cold in the Head," Coryza, and Catarrhal Headache. Sold by druggists everywhere; 50 cents.

"Untold Agony from Catarrh."

Prof. W. HAUENER, the famous mesmerist, of Ithaca, N. Y., writes: "Some ten years ago I suffered untold agony from chronic nasal catarrh. My family physician gave me up as incurable, and I must die. My case was such a bad one, that every day, towards sunset, my voice would become so hoarse I could barely speak above a whisper. In the morning my coughing and clearing of throat would almost strangle me. By the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, in three months, I was a well man, and the cure has been permanent."

"Constantly Hawking and Spitting."

THOMAS J. RUSHING, Esq., 2908 Pine Street, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I was a great sufferer from catarrh for three years. At times I could hardly breathe, and was constantly hawking and spitting, and for the last eight months could not breathe through the nostrils. I thought nothing could be done for me. Luckily, I was advised to try Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and I am now a well man. I believe it to be the only sure remedy for catarrh now manufactured, and no one has only to give it a fair trial to experience astounding results and a permanent cure."

Three Bottles Cure Catarrh.

ELI ROBBINS, Runyan P. O., Columbia Co., Pa., says: "My daughter had catarrh when she was five years old, very badly. I saw Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy advertised, and resolved to purchase a bottle for her, and soon saw that it helped her; a third bottle effected a permanent cure. She is now eighteen years old and sound and hearty."

America's Dead Sea.

Salt Lake, America's Great Dead Sea is mysterious, because covering as it does 2,500 square miles with an average of forty feet, no man has yet found its outlet. Fresh streams pour into it from all sides, and yet to-day it is briny as when first discovered. It is one fifth pure salt, and so dense is it that it is impossible to sink in it. It has puzzled scientists from all quarters of the globe to tell what becomes of the water that constantly flows into its capacious maw, and while some have given as a solution the possibility of a subterranean outlet, and some have accounted for its disappearance by solar evaporation, no absolute satisfactory theory has yet been assigned for the lake maintaining its average volume since its first discovery. Strange to relate, while there is no outlet to this saline mass there is yet a strong current round in two places. Old seamen who have navigated the lake for years have always held to the theory that this was the fastest water in the world for rowing, for two reasons. One of these was that the water being so buoyant a boat would naturally float higher and therefore displace less water; and the other, that the water being so dense the blade of the oar necessarily had much more purchase because of the great resistance of the heavy water. It is further argued that the greater the speed of the boat the less the displacement, and hence the faster ought to be the time made in covering a certain distance. One of the peculiarities of the lake is its proneness to sudden and totally unexpected storms. On the clearest possible day, when not a cloud can be seen overhead and the sun is shining brightly, a squall is liable to rise on the water, and the wind has been known under these circumstances to blow at the rate of sixty miles an hour. These winds come from the mountain tops and hillsides which are only a few miles to the eastward. Sometimes they rush down the narrow canons, and, stealing silently across the plains between the mountains and water, spend their force on a current of air coming across the lake from the north. At the point of contact the storm will be terrific, and then there is great danger to unseaworthy vessels.

It was generally supposed that everything worth discovering in Colorado and the other Rocky Mountain States and Territories had been discovered long ago. But it seems that a waterfall as high as Niagara and a thousand times more beautiful has escaped the sight seeing explorers until recently, when a hunting party in quest of deer and bear found the new waterfall instead. The fall lacks the volume of water which pours over the Niagara precipice, being only 300 feet in width at the brink, and so shallow that it dissolves into mist before reaching the bottom of the canon. The beauty is derived from the rainbow effects produced by the mist. If this new discovery is not part of an advertisement for some summer resort syndicate, the wonder will be how such a rare waterfall managed to hide itself so long.

Gentlemen—Five years ago I was so unfortunate as to contract an extremely bad case of blood poison. My boxes school and my muscles began to swell and contract. I was under treatment of the physician from the inception of the disease until I found that he could do me no good. Then, through the advice of a friend I began taking S. S. S. Your medicine seemed to have an immediate effect. I took six bottles, and to-day am sound and well. That was two or three years ago, but I have seen no evidence of the return of the disease, and I take this opportunity to thank you for what it has done for me. It saved my life. MASON & HAMLIN

The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin Organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.

Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequalled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all of the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogues $22 TO $500. free.

Mason & Hamlin do not hesitate to make the extraordinary claim for their pianos, that they are superior to all others. They recognize the high excellence achieved by other leading makers in the art of piano building, but still claim superiority. This they attribute solely to the remarkable improvement introduced by them in the year 1882, and now known as the "MASON & HAMLIN PIANO STRINGER," by the use of which is secured the greatest possible purity and refinement of tone, together with greatly increased capacity for standing in tune and other important advantages.

A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians, and tuners, sent, together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant.

Pianos and Organs sold for cash or easy payments; also rented.

It will drive all malarious diseases from the system. Hard workers of every vocation and persons whom a sedentary life renders prone to Dyspepsia find in Perrine's Pure Barley Malt Whiskey a powerful invigorant and helper to digestion. PERRINE'S PURE BARLEY MALT WHISKEY without unduly stimulating the kidneys increases their flagging activity, counteracts the effects of fatigue, hastens convalescence and is a wholesome and prompt diuretic. Watch the label! None genuine unless bearing the signature

The analysis as it appears by the Label on every bottle: I have carefully analyzed the PURE BARLEY MALT WHISKEY made by M. & J. S. Perrine and find it entirely free from fusel oil, furfurol, metals and acids and is absolutely pure. Signed, Camillia Arthur Mater, Graduate of the Universities of Munich, Geneva and Wiesbaden

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPP'S COCOA.
BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:
